Canton, Michigan-September 25, 2022 - Gabrielle Saffell has released an e-book titled THE FIERCE WOMEN OF MY SHORT STORIES. $5.00 on Smashwords. The collection will be available June 12, 2024

Raised by an independent mother, the author understands not everyone knows the definition of thinking for yourself. Wanting to see women represented in a good light, fighting to stay independent is particularly important no matter what type of relationship they are in, whether it is work, friendships or family.

In the first story, "Alison," Alison Parks is terribly injured in a car accident the night of her wedding. Months after her vows, she wonders if her husband Frank took them as seriously as she did. Alison is dedicated to putting her body back together, but her husband has the clutches to take the place of his helicopter mom.

"Aaliyah" is about a teenage run-a-way. Her foster parents strict extreme religious and abusive ways to try to find herself on the city streets. You know home-life must be tough if she prefers to survive the urban streets than to succumb to one more day at home.

In "Snow," a husband decides to take his wife on a trip to escape the pressures his wife has during the Christmas holiday to Las Vegas to get away from the freeze, while on a business trip. She never said she wanted to get away from it all. She was only feeling the newness of being an empty nester now that the last of their children is away at college, no plans to come home for the holiday. The wife is fed up with his controlling her every move to stick with her plan to put her foot down.
